WASHINGTON – Rep. Harry Mitchell made the following statement regarding President Barack Obama's first joint Congressional Address:

"President Obama struck the right tone for our nation right now. The people of the United States are uncertain and nervous about their economic future. They are struggling to make ends meet and are in no mood for partisan politics. The President called upon us to work together to find solutions, and I believe we must do so. The problems we face right now are too serious for any of us to do otherwise."
